The papers of Martin and Jessie Glaberman were placed in the Archives of Labor and Urban Affairs by Martin Glaberman between 1973 and 1980 and opened for research in August of 1983. Additional papers were placed in the Archives in 1989 and opened for research in 1994.

Martin Glaberman was born in New York City on December 13, 1918. He graduated from the City College of New York with a degree in political science in 1939. His graduate education included work at American University and an M.A. in sociology from the University of Detroit in 1971. He has taught sociology and political science at the University of Detroit, Wayne County Community College and Wayne State University. He has lectured on a variety of subjects, including American history, labor movements, social problems and black history.

From 1942 to 1965 Mr. Glaberman was active in the labor movement, primarily in the United Auto Workers. In addition to being employed as a machine worker, he served as editor of several local union newspapers, a steward, a committeeman and an instructor in various union educational programs.

Mr. Glaberman was managing editor of Correspondence, a national labor newspaper, from 1953 to 1955. He has since been a freelance writer, with articles appearing in Labor History, Radical America, and New Politics among others. His book, Wartime Strikes, deals with the no-strike pledge issue in the UAW during World War II.

Jessie Glaberman was born in New York in 1922. Just prior to World War II she married Martin Glaberman. After receiving her education in New York City, they came to Michigan, where she worked in the war plants building truck and aircraft motors during World War II. As a result of her experience in the plants, she became actively involved in the labor and civil rights movements.

Up until her death in July 1981, she played an important role in the women's rights movement in the Detroit area, particularly at Wayne State University.

The papers of Martin and Jessie Glaberman reflect their many years of involvement in the labor, civil rights and women's movements.

Important subjects covered in the collection are:

African Americans
Black power--Michigan--Detroit
Committee of Correspondence
C. L. R. James
Labor unions--World War II

Part 1

Series I Subject and Correspondence Files, 1938-1977 Boxes 1- 21

Correspondence, articles, clippings and other items concerning Glaberman's involvement in American labor and radical movements. Most of the material relates to his association with the West Indian radical, C.L.R. James.

Glaberman was a member of the Johnson-Forest Tendency (i.e., C.L.R. James - Raya Dunayevskaya), a part of the Socialist Workers Party (SWP). Johnson Forest (J-F) and other minority groups within the SWP split from the majority in 1940 to form the Workers Party (WP). In 1947, after an unsuccessful attempt at reunifying the two socialist groups, J-F left the WP. For three months they remained independent before rejoining the SWP. J-F dissociated itself from the SWP in 1951.

After this, they formed the Committee of Correspondence or Correspondence Publishing Co. They issued many labor and political pamphlets along with the newspaper, Correspondence. In 1955, James broke with Dunayevskaya, who formed News and Letters Committees. The Committee of Correspondence split again in 1962. Those who remained with James renamed themselves Facing Reality Publishing Co., distributing pamphlets and their organ, Speak Out. Glaberman was involved with this group until its dissolution in 1970.

The files in this series are arranged alphabetically by topic, author or type of material. Minutes and rough drafts of articles may be found in the correspondence files. Background material and a draft of Glaberman's book, Wartime Strikes, are located in the subject files.
