John Herling was born April 14, 1905 in New York City. Between 1928, when he graduated from Harvard, and 1934, he worked for the League for Industrial Democracy, where he met his first wife, Mary Fox Herling. During this period he was also employed as a research assistant for Norman Thomas and as publicity director for Thomas's presidential campaigns in 1928, 1932, and 1936. Mary Fox Herling died in 1978 and Mr. Herling subsequently married Alice Wolfson.

Mr. Herling's interest in journalism began when he worked as a copy boy for the old New York World. Throughout the 1930s John Herling worked for the United Features Syndicate and Time, Inc., and spent a year with The March of Time in New York City. From 1939 to 1940 he served as director of the Children's Crusade for Children, an organization which assisted war refugees in Europe. In 1941 he accepted a position as director of the Labor and Social Relations Division of the Office of Inter-American Affairs. During 1946 Mr. Herling was a special correspondent in Europe, writing articles and radio transcripts for "Voice of America." Throughout the late 1950s and early 1960s he served as a White House correspondent and syndicated columnist for several newspapers specializing in labor affairs and lectured abroad for the Labor Affairs section of the State Department.

In 1947 Mr. Herling purchased Chester Wright's Labor Letter and promptly changed the name to John Herling's Labor Letter, which he edited and published until 1990. In addition to the Labor Letter, Mr. Herling authored several books, including Strikes Under the New Deal, The Great Price Conspiracy, and The Right to Challenge. At the time of his death on February 3, 1994, he was writing a history of the UAW.

The John Herling Collection contains personal and professional correspondence, reference material, and numerous publications by John Herling. Related material may be found in the Mary Fox Herling Collection.

The cost of processing the John Herling papers has been underwritten by a gift from the estate of John Herling.

Abstract

John Herling was a prominent journalist that wrote about the labor movement in several published books including Strikes Under the New Deal, The Great Price Conspiracy and The Right to Challenge. Herling was also working on other books about the labor movement, including a book about the UAW, at the time of his death in 1994.

The records in Part 2 consist primarily of interviews conducted by Herling as research for a book on the UAW, which was ultimately written by John Barnard and published in 2004 under the title, American Vanguard: The United Auto Workers During the Reuther Years, 1935-1970. The interviews were conducted mainly with people associated with the UAW, however several involve people in other labor unions. The records consist of transcripts or notes (taken during interviews that were not recorded), although there are a few speech and panel transcripts as well (noted in inventory). There are also audio recordings of interviews, panels, and conferences. Researchers should note that some pages of interview transcripts are missing, some audio recordings are unmarked, and not all interviews exist in both transcript and audio recording format.
