Historical note

The Faculty Women's Club of Wayne University was founded in January of 1935 by female faculty members of Wayne University. The organization's constitution initially stated that its purpose was "to promote the interests of all women on the campus and especially to forward the social life and professional interests of the women of the faculty"; later this purpose was changed to read "...the social life and professional interests of the members of the organization." The group was briefly named the Wayne University Women's Club, from 1939 until 1940. In 1960 the Faculty Women's Club became the Association of Faculty Women. The name change was intended to avoid confusion with Wayne State University's Faculty Wives' Club, and to emphasize the professional rather than the social aspects of the organization.

Scope and Content

Included in the records of the Faculty Women's Club are the organization's newsletters (1946-1960); meeting minutes and committee reports (1935-1960); annual reports (1941-1955); constitutions and bylaws (1940-1960); and treasurer's reports (1946-1960).
